Forty-Fourth Year, Number 77.

CIRCLING the CIRCLE

—A hammock is the spoonholder used at many a love feast.

—A man's credit is getting very low when he can't even borrow trouble.

—If a man fails to get what he really deserves he ought to be thankful.

—The Krakatoa volcano between Sumatra and Java, which in 1883 sent out a blast that proved fatal to 30,000 persons, recently sent out another small blast of molten lava.

—Art Stevens moved his family from Walnut township to the Hartman farm, Tuesday. Mr. Stevens will farm 340 acres. Pickaway county's loss is Franklin county's gain, as Mr. Stevens is an excellent farmer and citizen.

—The highest air temperature recorded in the United States by the Weather Bureau in 1927 occurred July 19, when 125 degrees Fahrenheit was registered by a tested thermometer exposed in a standard instrument shelter on Greenlawn Ranch, in Death Valley, Inyo county, California.

—What is claimed to be the largest relief map ever has been completed by the California Development board. It is 600 feet long and 18 feet wide. It shows all the natural features of California, together with cities, highways, railways, irrigation, plants and power developments.

—The Baltimore & Ohio railroad for 1927 reports a net income of $22,632,345, the second largest in the history of the company, but $4,977,414 below that of 1926. Total operating revenues of $246,078,510 were $11,404,876 or 4.66 per cent lower than the preceding year.

—Agents and farmer members from at least 75 Ohio counties are expected to attend the annual meeting of the Farm Bureau Mutual Automobile Insurance company which will be held in Columbus on March 15 and 16. Those planning to go from this county are: George K. Wright, H. O. Peters, A. C. Leist, Russell McDill, E. H. Fetherolf, Neal Goldsberry.

—Traffic lights in the city of New York made a saving of more than $12,500,000 for the city. The installation of 2,500 traffic signals in that city eliminated the necessity of employing 5,000 traffic policemen.

Machines which record on dials the cause and nature of a mishap where it occurred are being installed on the London underground railway.

—Dr. Louis Moreau, the first physician to practice his profession in Illinois, seems to have been in that region with a trading party when Father Marquette, then ill, passed his terrible winter of 1675 at the site of Chicago at the foot of what is now South Lincoln street. Father Marquette's condition improved under the care of this physician, but for some reason the priest, in his accounts of his travels and experiences, failed to identify his medical benefactor other than to mention his name. With a statement that the physician was to accompany him back to his camp on the morrow Father Marquette wrapped the mantle of obscurity around the doctor who made the first professional call in Illinois.

—Gurgling with a musical sound like poured molasses, "singing" rivers of mud at certain seasons of the year course down the sides of the Andes Mountains in the northern part of South America, forming one of the most interesting features of this great mountain system. In winter time the rain falls in torrents, converting the foothills of the mountains into actual streams of flowing gumbo. So rapidly is this erosion taking place that the whole outline of a chain of mountains may be changed in a year as to be unrecognizable. The mountains are largely a mixture of powdered rock and clay, of glacial formation and the higher slopes of the mountain chain are being washed down at the rate of five feet or more in a year. The winter rains carry this soft material down the valleys in a semi-liquid state, the mass "singing" as it moves along.

BOLD DAYLIGHT RAID STAGED IN HEART OF CITY

Trio of Robbers Used Sawed-Off Shotguns to Hold Up Five Employees.

COLUMBUS, O., March 6 — (INS) — Three bandits using sawed-off shotguns today robbed the Columbus Savings bank, in the downtown section of $30,000 in currency and escaped in a waiting automobile.

According to Manager Ben S. Dickson, the men rushed into the bank, one of them vaulting into the tellers' compartment brandishing a sawed-off shotgun, and forced the manager and four employees into a rear room after Dickson had been forced to open the safe.

The safe was then looted and the bandits made their get-away. The bank is the depository for the Pennsylvania cash payroll.

After the bandits left, one of the imprisoned employees attracted the attention of outsiders by tossing an inkwell through a window upon the sidewalk. A $2,600 payroll for a baking company, already made up, was included in the loot.

The employees are: L. F. Hindes, T. D. Stevenson, E. G. Huntzinger and C. D. Bode.

The great subscription campaign is now the theme of conversation in hundreds of homes throughout this section of Ohio and the enthusiasm resembles an epidemic sweeping everything before it. That it has been such a success is due to the fact that the candidates and their friends who are so vitally interested in it have preached their cause to their many friends, relatives and acquaintances. Votes are coming in daily and not only the candidates are interested, but each has friends who are clipping coupons from the paper and who are coming to the Herald office and renewing their subscriptions in advance and asking that the votes be credited to their favorite worker.

Candidates are not held to their own particular territory when gathering subscriptions, but are privileged to solicit them anywhere. Get them any old place you can, for subscriptions mean votes and votes mean prizes.

Candidates are entitled to accept subscription payments and to give receipt for same. Votes are given for new subscriptions and renewals. Votes mean prizes. Subscribers are requested to pay (Concluded on Page Eight)

Industries Of Circleville Are Outlined On Page 2 Of Herald

The Herald today carries a page advertisement, on Page 2, telling about industry in Circleville and giving you some figures of the number employed by these concerns and their payroll in 1927. These figures may surprise you. The average citizen of Circleville fails to appreciate the full value of these institutions to this community.

The true worth of a community is displayed in the earning power of its people. The prosperity of a community depends, to a great extent on the steady employment of the people. These local industries play an important part in making Circleville a prosperous community, a good place

JOB OFFICE OF HERALD MOVED IN MAIN PLANT

All Departments of Publishing Company Are Under One Roof, Ready to Serve.

The Circleville Herald has moved its job office from the old Darst publication building in the Second National bank building to its newspaper rooms and in the future all job work will be done from The Circleville Herald building which has been remodeled and put in shape for a modern, commercial and job printing plant as well as for newspaper publishing.

Paul Johnson, who has been in charge of the job printing department, has severed his connections.

New type is to be added in another week and many other improvements made to give Circleville and Pickaway county the finest job and commercial printing plant in its history. Everything from printing the size of a postage stamp to catalogues and newspapers will be printed from The Herald job printing department from now on. Telephone your job printing to 782 and your work will be done promptly and efficiently. At least let us estimate on your work; perhaps we can save you some money in addition to giving you the service and printing that experience and new and modern machinery can do.

The change has been made at once and no more job printing will now be accepted from the old location in the Second National bank building for The Herald.

PLEADS GUILTY WHEN TRIAL IS ABOUT TO OPEN

Hammer Slayer of Husband Wins Right to Admit Murder in Second Degree.

COURTHOUSE, PAINESVILLE O., March 6 — (INS) — Garbed in a knee-length black silk dress and her slim form trembling, Velma West, flapper-slayer of her husband, stood before Judge J. D. Barnes today and heard herself sentenced to life imprisonment, after she had pleaded guilty to a charge of second degree murder. Velma swayed as sentence was pronounced. Her attorney gently escorted her to her chair. Then when her father, Bert L. Van Woert, came over to console her, she broke down and wept. Her slim form shook like a leaf in the wind.

Petted By Father "Oh, Daddy, Daddy—I don't know what to say," she moaned. "Don't cry Baby," said her father, gently, tears coursing down his cheek.

Velma swathed in a big gray fur coat with a high collar came into court this morning to hear her fate. She removed her coat and sat back quietly waiting for the lawyer to go into action. As soon as court opened her chief counsel, Francis W. Poulson, a heavy set, florid faced man arose and said to the court:

"The defendant, Velma West, offers to plead guilty of murder in the second degree."

Prosecutor Agrees Seth Paulin, prosecutor of Lake county, then said:

"Your honor, my associate, Homer Harper, and myself, have considered the question of accepting this plea offered by counsel for the defense and we recommend that it be accepted."

The question of how Velma was to plead was cut and dried. It had been threshed out in all day conferences yesterday by attorneys for both sides, in the judge's chambers, with Judge Barnes present.

INDUSTRY IN CIRCLEVILLE

Few people who live in Circleville appreciate the value of the industries located here. Many times you are asked by strangers, "What have you in Circleville?" You may tell the names of some of these industries---but that is only a small part of their value to Circleville and Pickaway County.

CURING BABY'S ILLS BY PROPER FEEDING

Sometimes There's Too Much Fat in Diet, Often There's Not Enough Sugar, So Balance Must Be Found.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WHEN a baby develops highly-colored urine, or urine of strong odor, it should create the suspicion that insufficient water is being given. The body wastes cannot be dissolved and excreted for as they should be without an abundance of this fluid.

Constipation is a common symptom in infants. It is likely to be made much worse by the failure to give lots of water.

The great cause for constipation in a baby, as in an adult, is improper feeding. The diet may not contain enough sugar. Or there may be too much fat. Or there may be another cause, overfeeding. Any one of these factors plays a part in producing constipation.

Wrong feeding is responsible for all manner of digestive symptoms. It is not uncommon for some mothers to give the breast every time the baby is fretful. Such practice is fatal to the infant's welfare because it upsets the digestion. One of the symptoms which may result is constipation.

It is a mistake to permit constipation to continue. If it does, the bowel gradually dilates. It loses elasticity and normal muscular action. In the nature of things, this condition will make the constipation permanent.

It is a curse to anybody, infant or adult, to permit the rectum to become a slave to cathartics and other drugs. The natural means of promoting bowel action are far better. Diet and plenty of water should be all the treatment and prevention needed.

In extreme cases, as I have said recently about the constipation of adults, mineral oil may be given. It is not absorbed; it acts merely to lubricate the bowels. This remedy is better than drugs. But proper feeding is better still.

When there is an actual accumulation in the lower bowels, it may be necessary to give enemas of soap and water. But if the baby is properly fed it will not need to be fussed over until it is a nervous wreck. It is much wiser to avoid the necessity for mechanical treatment.

Every case must be studied on its merits but there is no doubt that right feeding will do away with the need of drugs in overcoming constipation. Fruit juices, tomato or prune juice, as well as quantities of water will help a lot.

Sometimes a bottle-fed baby will thrive if the milk supply is changed. The milk from another cow may serve to better the welfare of the child.

But whatever you do, do not begin the practice of giving laxatives or mild cathartics. Never depend on your own knowledge when it comes to giving drugs. This is your doctor's job.

M. J. D. Q.—I have too many blood cells and wish to decrease them. What should I do? Have been advised by one doctor to drink water with my food. What would you suggest?

A.—Follow your doctor's advice. This is nothing abnormal and nothing to be alarmed about.

B. D. Q.—What do you advise for shampooing the hair?

A.—Any good soap, such as castile.

B. M. A. Q.—I cannot stand fresh air. Even a change from one room to another causes severe coughing spells. Have had special throat treatment which fails to relieve me.

A.—Consult a nose and throat specialist for examination.

M. K. R. Q.—What treatment do you suggest for pharyngitis and what will clear up a coated tongue?

A.—A soothing spray should be helpful until your doctor prescribes for you. A coated tongue is usually due to constipation or to an intestinal disorder. Watch the diet and keep the system clear. For further particulars send a self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

E. F. Q.—What kind of a physician should a person suffering from mental depression, brought on by an introspective condition, consult? I am powerless to combat it; is this a physical or mental condition? What would you advise?

A.—My advice would be to see a neurologist with a view to getting at the underlying cause of trouble. It is of course possible that a physical condition is at the source. Your doctor will advise you after examination.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 7
There is no doubt that a skillful person acquainted with the nature of the stars may avert many of their effects.—White.

Although certain new ventures may prosper on this day, according to the message of the stars, yet on the whole things may work at cross purposes. It is probable that there may be much disruption or moving about, with restlessness and agitation, in business as well as personal affairs. The latter, especially as applied to domestic and affectional attachments, may assume irregular or disquieting phases. Conservatism and prudence are enjoined.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of opportunity in new directions, with a degree of success, especially through tact and skillful manipulations, but matters generally are under adverse conditions. Be careful and discreet in purely personal affairs lest there be sensational reports. A child born on this day may have talents of an original nature but may be restless and nervous, with inclination to frequent change. It may succeed soon through diplomacy or stratagem.

Love's Embers

By Adele Garrison
Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

Madge Discusses Mary's Behavior with Noel Veritzen.

THIS time, at my repetition of my theory that Mary did not mean a word of the cruel speech she flung at him, Noel Veritzen did not stop playing. But he drew his bow across the strings so swiftly that if people had been dancing to his music they would soon have found themselves gasping for breath.

"Slower!" I cautioned. "I know I'm astonishing you, but you mustn't betray your feeling in your music. However, I'm not going to keep you much longer. Upon second thoughts it will be much better for Mary if you and I go back to the campfire together. I shall explain that I followed the race of Mary, Marion and Junior, but was unable to keep up with them over the dunes and missed them coming back—all of which is the truth. Then I shall say that I came across you and brought you back for the singing which we always have when the moon comes up. It's rising now, as you see. So finish this piece and then we'll go back. I'll tell you the rest as we go, and we'll see if there's something which can be done."

He played the selection through to the end, and put his violin in its case. Then he put his hand beneath my elbow, and we started across the dune. With strict fidelity to his compact he kept silent, and I went on giving voice to the theory which first had come to me when Mary, in her room at the farm, cried hysterically, "I can't, I can't!" at my urging her to grant Noel's request to see me free.

But now I'm as puzzled as I was before. You—you can't mean, Mrs. Graham, that you think Mary cares for me?

"I do not believe Mary is acting upon her own volition in refusing to see you, Noel," I said slowly. "She appears to me like a child obeying some command in fear of a punishment she refuses."

"But who would coerce her?" he asked wildly. "Surely you do not think she is on such terms with that young Jackson, that he would dare give her a command?"

"I stopped in our descent of the dune, and whirled facing him."

"For absolute and colossal idiocy, commend me to a young man in love!" I exclaimed. "No! I don't think that Mr. George Logan Jackson enters into this at all."

"But who?" he repeated in bewildered fashion, and I put my hand upon his arm and drew him down the dune.

"I am afraid I shall startle you if I tell you, Noel," I said. "But let me ask you, have you had recent actions raised to your friendship with Mary?"

He stopped again and struck his hands together. "I see it all now," he said. "I didn't understand before. But I ought not to put my theory into words, for if I were to speak literally, I should have to answer your question by saying that I have had no word said to me concerning Mary. That can all wait, however. It's Mary's attitude which troubles me. It unsettles me so. Do you know in a way I was almost glad when she was so decided and so brutally frank about her feeling for me. I'm not saying it wasn't a favor, for I've told you how much I care for her. But it decided things at least in a way, set me free. But now I'm as puzzled as I was before. You—you can't mean, Mrs. Graham, that you think Mary cares for me?"

"Constitution" In Last Cruise Is Taken To Drydock To Be "Saved"

CHARLESTON, N. Y., March 6.—(INS)—The final cruise of the U. S. Frigate Constitution, victor in 42 naval battles for the supremacy of the seas in the days when the United States was a struggling nation, was made in taking the vessel into drydock from an anchorage just outside the drydock.

Lieut. C. H. K. Miller, of Philadelphia, stood on the bridge of "Ironsides," planks that had been trod by Barrow, Rodgers, Isaac Hull and other heroes when the Constitution was battling with French, British and Tripolian pirates.

The cruise of about 100 yards took nearly 12 hours to complete and in that time Lieut. Miller did not leave the bridge of the ship. The Constitution was placed in the drydock without the slightest injury, not even a bit of paint being scratched from her sides in the trip.

DETROIT PHYSICIAN SLAIN IN HIS OFFICE

DETROIT, Mich., March 6.—(INS)—Authorities today sought to pierce the mystery that surrounds the death of Dr. William K. Baker, prominent Detroit physician.

Dr. Baker, 70 years old, and one of the wealthiest professional men in the city, was shot to death in his office at ten o'clock last night by an unknown assailant.

Police are searching for a young man who was seen to run out of the building after a shot was heard. One theory is that the physician was killed when he resisted a holdup man.

Mrs. Annette Brown had as dinner guests Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Baker and daughter, Mary Kathryn, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob P. Anderson.

Neighbors Recall Edison's Boyhood

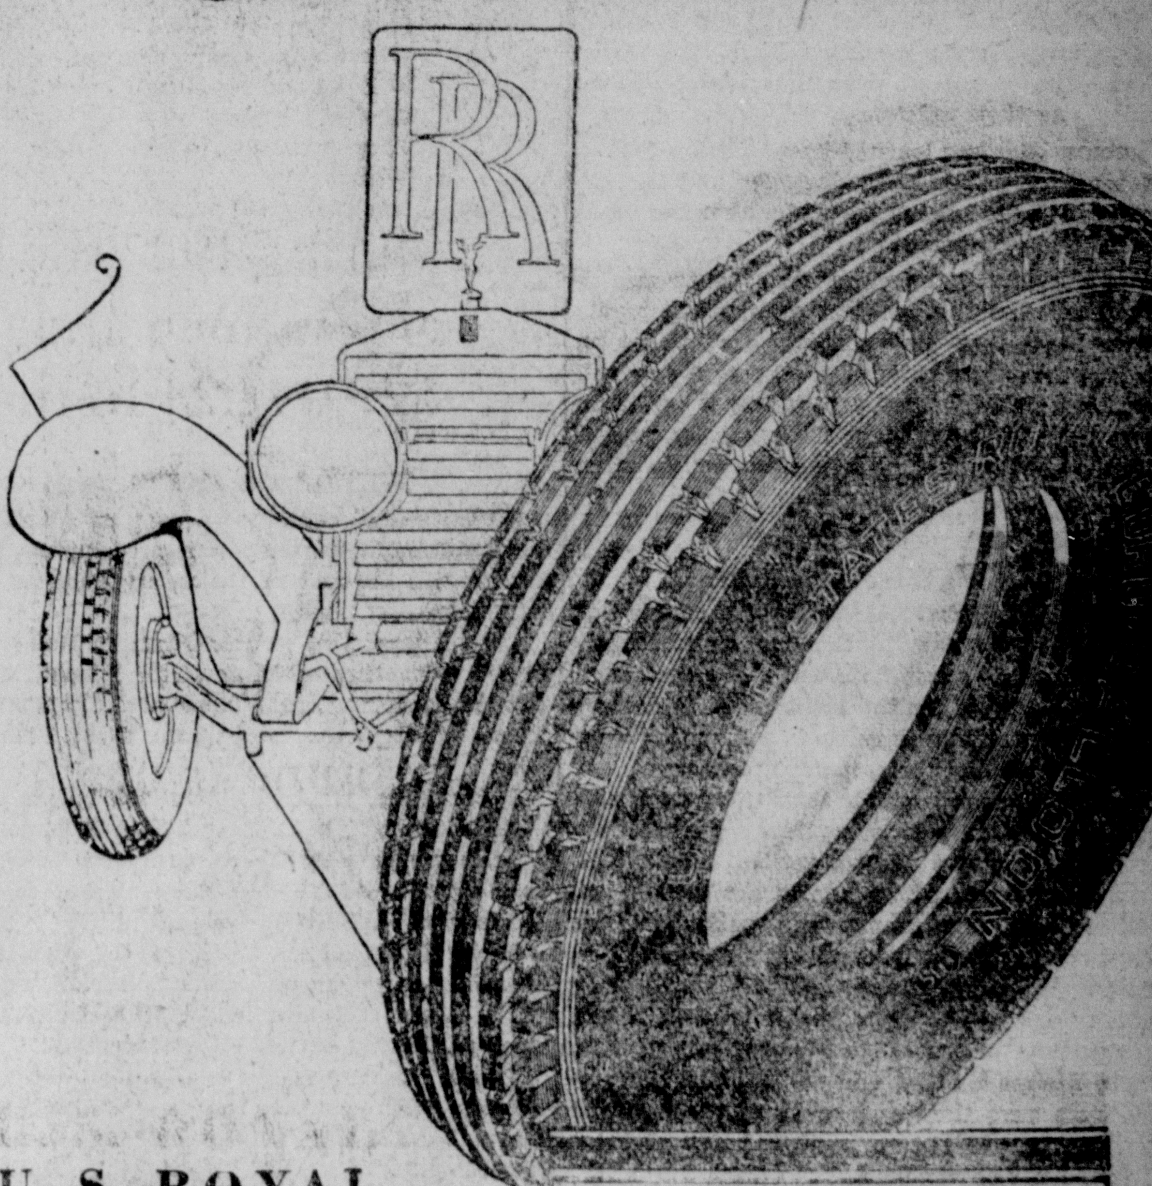

MILAN, O., March 6.—(UP)—Thomas Edison, electrical wizard, or—Thomas Edison town dillard. Just a tow headed boy who liked to play alone—and who seemed unable to learn his lessons—in the picture conjured up by Ransom McLaughlin, next door neighbor to the old Edison home.

"Why, he was known as 'Edison's fool' when he was a kid," said McLaughlin.

An aunt who lived "down the river a piece" from Milan tells of an instance when Thomas was visiting her.

She went out to call her nephew for supper. After calling him for several minutes without response she went to the barn to see what was keeping him. There she found Thomas sitting patiently on a nest of eggs, declaring he was going to hatch them.

BIBLE THOUGHT

THE CAUSE FOR PRAISE—Praise ye the Lord. Praise God in his sanctuary: Praise him in the firmament of his power. Praise him for his mighty acts: praise him according to his excellent greatness.—Psalm 150:1, 2.

PRAYER—My soul shall make her boast in the Lord: the humble shall hear thereof and be glad.

Women and Automobiles.

Are women better or worse than men as automobile drivers? Some authorities maintain that they are much more careful, and statistics seem to show that they are not involved in so many accidents. But to that argument it is replied that they do not drive nearly as much as men do, and that if they were driving more they would show more accidents. Anyway women seem to have a more innate sense of courtesy than men, and that feeling keeps them from doing many dangerous things.

The ability to drive automobiles has been a wonderful addition to the lives of many women. It is particularly a godsend to those in suburban and country neighborhoods, whose homes would be inconveniently located but for their machines. But with these cars, they keep in touch with town life and combine the advantages of city and country living.

Automobiles are a wonderful help in community work, and by driving around on various errands for their churches and clubs, the women get the necessary work of these organizations done with much less labor than formerly. The women drive to the railroad stations and places of work and business to meet their husbands returning from their daily labors, and the command over the gasoline horse adds greatly to their efficiency.

The woman who has learned how to drive feels a greater sense of power and adequacy, and the experience adds to her confidence and makes her more resourceful and competent.

Some of the older women can not seem to master this art. They find the problem of meeting traffic so worries them that they scarcely dare to go on with it. But the young girls of the present day will not have that trouble. They are taking it up at an age when they feel competent for anything, and it will be considered part of a girl's education to learn to drive.

The Old Fashioned Home.

A score of the speakers attending the conference recently held at New York by the child welfare committee of America, agreed that the old fashioned home is the best place for the children. They deplored the fact that the marriage tie is not regarded as the sacred and binding thing it used to be.

Many people seem to think that their own personal desires are to rule everything, and if they want a thing, they are always entitled to have it. Hence in many cases where homes are broken up, by a little more forbearance and patience these discordant couples might have gotten along together.

When people bring children into the world, they have a responsibility to them that is not to be set aside for personal whims. If they would rein in their passionate desires a little, and not get married until they were sure they were getting the husband of wife they wanted permanently, many of these homes would not be wrecked.

Fewer Acres, More Food.

A suggestion of what modern efficiency can do is given in the statement that in the past 45 years, 4,500,000 acres of farm land in New York state have gone out of cultivation, yet the farmers of that state are producing more food than ever before. The same thing is probably true in most of the states.

Probably all the food necessary to feed the American people could be produced on half the land now cultivated, if strictly scientific methods were followed. We shall save money, reduce the cost of food, and make farming profitable, by teaching the farmers that technical education is as necessary in their business as in engineering or manufacturing.

The Exchange of Favors.

People who go through life expecting that they are always going to get things, without giving an equivalent in return, do not come out specially well.

People receive many benefits from their community as a whole, and should make a return. The business for which they work is usually greatly helped by favorable conditions which the community has made. Therefore when we receive all kinds of benefits from a community, including a chance to earn a living, we ought to make all the return we can, and we gain by doing so. Perhaps the most practical thing we can do to make that return, is to spend our money at home.

The RAMBLER

By NORMAN W. RALSTON

"SO LONG, ADAM"

I VE just Received the News of the Passing of An old friend, Adam Breede, Writer, newspaper Publisher,

Big game hunter and Idealist, And somehow I can't seem to make this Column rhyme today; For out in Hastings, Neb., lies An old friend, The kind of a chap You like to know, And I'm wondering What Hastings Will do without Him,

His kindly words, His smile, His dreams and his Little lines of Humor that helped Make his paper Bubble forth with Personality— Adam loved adventure, In Africa, in Alaska, in India He hunted big game, And now has come The Great Adventure, The Great Trip From which there is No coming back, No Adam to wave An elk's horns or A lion's head at you, And how we'll all Miss it!

And what we mean to say Is, Somewhere out West Where soon spring flowers Will dot the reaches Of God's plains, They've buried in a Warming soil The great still heart Of Adam Breede But somehow when the Evening comes I know that he Will come to me When I bring forth My memories.

WE'LL MISS THESE, TOO!

(Today's mail contained a copy of Adam's paper, and here again we see his pointed humor, while he joined with the rest of the merry gang of columnists in tossing puns.)

Dear Adam: I've written Norman Ralston, as he is the only other bachelor editor I know, and if he doesn't accept me, may I propose to you? It's Leap Year!—Haitch, the Lady from West Palm Beach, Fla.

Betcha! But you had better look before you leap. Adam Breede, in Hastings, Neb. Tribune.

Is it pretty easy to get a divorce in Florida in case I don't like the way you cook waffles, Haitch?—Norman W. Ralston, this colyum.

Well, if you do get a divorce Norman, see it that Haitch pays you alimony.—Adam, again.

We often feel like marrying a Florida girl in winter, alimony or no.—Norm, again.

If all Norman wants is to spend the winter in Florida, where he can live in a bathing suit from November till May, why doesn't he ask me to loan him the price of a round trip ticket?—Haitch, again.

He hasn't the nerve.—Adam, again.

Oh, yes, I have, but there's nothing wrong with Ohio's climate this year—I'll wait until next!

Suffragists, who used to be regarded as tempests, would look like amateurs today compared to some of our ardent clubwomen.

The time for the young man, says Bob Ryder, seeking to avoid possible entanglements to go home is when the girl says, apparently in despair: Of course you are stronger than I am!

Why leave an interesting point, Bob?

Now that men's underwear has been glorified we can expect to see them wearing short pants in a few years, short enough to just expose a wee bit of the bright-colored "undies" and we wonder then if the girls will be as interested in seeing us mount a high street car step as we used to be when they started to climb one.

A RECIPÉ

Now don't expect the sun to shine When you are feeling blue, The way to make the old sun shine Just vow that you'll shine, too.

Dear Norman:

Spring is in the offing and near poets are bursting into song.

As evidence we submit the following:

When the Johnny jump pump up And the Cow-slips slip once more, Then we our tires will pump up Just as in the days of yore.

"And what we mean to say is:"

When Spring arrives from Springfield We shall motor through the park; Where the Hoboes from Hoboken Sweetly dream from dawn 'till dark.

THE JAZZ SINGER

NOVELIZED BY ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. "THE JAZZ SINGER," starring Al Jolson, is a Warner Bros. picture. It is based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson.

SYNOPSIS

The New York Ghetto seethes in preparation for its important holiday, Yom Kippur. Cantor Radinowicz, who has taught his son, Jakie, the Hebrew songs, preparing him to be a Cantor, is horrified by his discovery of the boy singing ragtime in a "beer garden." He whips the child and Jakie runs away from home on the Eve of the Day of Atonement. Ten years elapse. Jakie, his name changed to Jack Robin, enters a San Francisco booking office hunting a job in vaudeville. He finds a friend of the road, Buster Billings, who tells him that Mary Dale, a dancer whom Jack admires, is playing there.

"Well, she's not exactly a friend of mine—as a matter of fact I don't even know her. Never met her, even."

"Well, if I remember," Buster began.

"O, I used to catch her act in Cheyenne after ours. They had a good spot on the bill," Jack admitted shyly. "And I admire her work. She's going to make good, and don't you forget it!"

"Sure. She's a great little kid."

"Where are they playing?"

"Orpheum."

"How did the act go over here?"

"Swell notices. Mary got a couple of lines on the Flame Dance of hers."

"That always was a good number."

"Sure. What I always say is she'd ought to get some good, original stuff, an' then—"

Buster's theories were interrupted by the sound of a buzzer. The waiting group looked expectantly towards the inner office. The office boy jumped to his feet and hurried in. In a few moments he returned and cast a disparaging glance over the room.

"Th' boss ain't seen nobody else today," he barked. "You can all duck. He returned to his desk and began covering his typewriter."

The applicants looked warily from one to another, and just as wearily arose and began filing out. Buster and Jack followed the example of the others.

"Where to?" Jack turned to his friend.

"Hungry, kid?"

"Well, I haven't any money, and—"

"Go ahead. You haven't eat for a couple a days, either, have you?"

"No, nothing but some sandwiches," Jack shut his teeth with a little click.

"Well, I'll tell you what, kid. I got an ol' side kick down to 'Coffee Dan's'. I ain't got no money, either. But Frank'll stake us to something. We can have some kind of a feed. An' you'd better get something inside you."

"That listens good to me, Buster."

They started for the elevator and soon they were out on the street. A mist was settling down and in the forced gleaming a gray green light was seeping through a rent in the fog banks, throwing into high relief the Purdie Hills and the rolling steppes of Marin county.

CHAPTER V.

The lights in the Orpheum Theatre snapped off, and the matinee crowds threaded their way to the street, standing in clusters, blocking passages, signalling street cars, wending their various ways up and down the street. From the stage entrance came groups of twos and threes, chatting, laughing, arguing.

A small, little figure appeared, dressed in a shrewdly cut suit of black and white pin stripe. A smartly tailored hat allowed the escape of golden-yellow tendrils of hair that curled back enticingly over the rolled brim of the headpiece.

The girl stood drawing on her gloves and gazed dreamily out towards the bay. The Tamapals towered to the north; the Golden Gate lay straight ahead and to the company, has equipped all of its hydroplanes with it.

The secret of this mystery powder is that it generates large amounts of gas as soon as it gets into contact with water. This gas as light as air, fills up air-tight bags which are folded into a small package over the powder container; the bags expand, displace that much water and lift or keep afloat what ever they are attached to.

"An' now I'm going to introduce Mr. Jack Robin, the famous tenor from Petaluma. An' I'm going to ask Mr. Jack Robin to sing you a little song. How about it, folks?"

TIME TO DO SOME BOMBING

LORD DUNMORE'S EXPEDITION to the PICKAWAY PLAINS

By Howard Jones

The first Continental Congress met in the summer of 1774. In September 1775 the House of Burgesses had been displaced and Patrick Henry who said, "Give me liberty or give me death," became a leader in the embryonic legislature convened at Richmond, thereafter to be the capital of the State of Virginia. The Indians faithful to their promise had assembled at Fort Dunmore in the Spring of 1775 where they waited in vain for Lord Dunmore to attend and formally ratify the treaty. Political excitement was running high and it was with difficulty that the colony could appoint a committee to meet the Indians. However, a treaty was then made from memoranda furnished by Lord Dunmore to the representatives appointed by the new government at Richmond and the Indians returned home. The military commander of the British stationed at Detroit in the Dominion of Quebec was using all his influence to bring the Indians to his side, almost all of the northern Indians had pledged themselves to the British and they were pressing the southern Indians to take advantage of the promises of the great King over the water.

Cornstalk, in as far as he was able, held his people to the treaty, notwithstanding it was not being observed by the white men. Gradually he found his influence lessening, a fact which he greatly deplored, and at intervals he visited the military posts to report to the colonials the discontent of his warriors. It was while on one of these peaceful missions to Fort Harmar, that he was unfairly and unjustly imprisoned and afterwards brutally murdered by a few Virginian militiamen.

Notwithstanding the influence of the British among the Confederated Indians who were under Cornstalk there were few depredations for several years along the border of southern and eastern parts of the Dominion of Quebec. The promises made Lord Dunmore were largely observed in this section thus releasing many pioneers who raised companies and marched to join the Revolutionists under Washington. If the Confederated Indians under Cornstalk and waged continual warfare along the border of New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia, if they had remained from the first on the side of England, the army of Burgoyne at Saratoga would probably not have occurred. If the Virginians and Pennsylvanians and the pioneers from other colonies had faithfully observed the conditions of the alliance made with Cornstalk at Camp Charlotte and confirmed at Fort Pitt, in the Fall of 1775 it is doubtful if the British could have converted any of that Confederacy to their side; so little attention was given to the conditions of the treaty that the Indians were compelled to consider it only another white-man's scrap of paper. In spite of this non-observance Cornstalk was loyal to his promises to his death.

It was but a short time after Lord Dunmore's expedition until the events at Boston, Concord and Lexington stirred the colonies to that rebellion which started from an effort to get justice from England and a reformation of treatment accorded the colonists. The pamphlet of "Thomas Paine proclaimed that an appropriate time had come for a rebellion and separation and it was so convincing that the movement or reform was converted into one for separation, for complete independence. Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton, George Mason, George Washington, the Adamases soon became converts to a cause which at first was not thought of.

The great benefit to the cause of independence resulting from Dunmore's expedition to the Pickaway Plains can be easily seen if the acts are properly connected. The peace which the Indians made with the Virginians enabled men to enlist in the Continental army who otherwise would have been held at home to protect their families. Captain George Rogers Clark made acquaintance with the Shawnees, Delawareans, Miami and other Indians who met at Camp Charlotte when stood him well in hand when he marched his little army of about two hundred men through the Indian country to take the British posts on the Mississippi and Vincennes on the Wabash with Hamilton the British commander at Detroit in the Dominion of Quebec.

Berlin Engineer Has Hollow Magnet Which Shows Double Energy

BERLIN, March 6.—(INS)—Hollow magnets develop double the energy of full ones, is the astounding discovery of the Berlin civil engineer Josef Zacher, who claims that his invention is bound to revolutionize the fundamental principles of magnetic-electrical science.

Zacher submitted his discovery for a test at the Reich Physical Institute and weeks of laborious research and experiments proved the truth of his claims.

Zacher's discovery comes as a relief for the electrical industries for it was found impossible to improve magnets by making them out of better metal.

HOWE ABOUT?

By ED. W. HOWE

© Bell Syndicate, WNU Service

"Near where I live," a man writes me, "there are three small children so ill-behaved that they are the terror of their parents and the neighborhood. Property in the immediate vicinity has become almost worthless; the father and mother of the bad children have become almost crazy. It is really a serious and disturbing situation; two worthy parents being ruined, three children going to the devil, and a dozen neighbors preparing to sell their houses at a loss."

It is much easier and better to be a gentleman, a home-owner, a good mechanic, an agreeable neighbor, a good citizen, a good and successful farmer, foreman, superintendent, business man or millionaire, than a poor man howling for help. The help the poor get from the government and their neighbors is scanty. It is always easier to make a living than it is to beg it.

In a pretty way a woman has compromised herself with a man. A letter from that man is delivered to her before her husband. The latter knows whom the letter is from. The wife hands it to him and says she does not care to open it. "Very well," he says, "then there is only one thing to do. All the women in the audience applaud. In real life under such circumstances, a man would have raised three or four different kinds of hell."

Publishers employ certain wise men to read manuscripts, and decide on their availability. When one of these critics accepts a manuscript and it finally fails (as frequently happens) who is to blame: the people or the critic? Should not the critic at least be discharged? Should not publishers demand that their critics be bonded in responsible companies?

That was a good thing said the other day by a Frenchman: that France and Germany were in position to let byones be byones, each having won a great victory over the other.

American dentists are said to be the best in the world; yet I have never seen a set of false teeth that looked natural. They are made too pretty, like wigs. Why does not a realist appear among wig makers and make a wig with a bald spot on top?

A witty man recently said of the great poverty in this country: "If we are all finally compelled to go to the poorhouse, I thank God we will be able to go in our own automobiles."

Monday Club Holds Its Annual Social Session At Church

Covers were laid for seventy-five at the social session of the Monday Club, held in the social rooms of the Presbyterian church, Monday evening. This annual gathering of the club, when work is laid aside, and the members come together for just a social hour, has been found necessary for club life. And for last evening, the program, and social committee in charge, may well congratulate themselves, upon the happy working out of their efforts. An epicurean dinner was served, and in the after dinner entertainment, the proverbial pin, might have been dropped, as the gathering, in a whole, lost itself in the rendering of the program.

MICHIGAN FIVE RUINS TITLE HOPES OF BADGERS

WISCONSIN IS DEFEATED BY WOLVERINES

Purdue Gains Firmer Hold On First Place in Big Ten By Beating Iowa.

By GENE HOFFMAN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO, March 6—Michigan did it. And how!

In their most vicious mood of the season, the Wolverine wreckers tore into Wisconsin at Ann Arbor last night and when the bone-snapping contest was over the Badgers had lost their last chance to win or tie the Big Ten conference basketball race.

The Wolverines did it. Ann Arbor! The score was 42 to 19. Purdue Wins.

But that was only part of the news. Over at Lafayette, Ind., Purdue was tightening its grip on the top rung by beating Iowa, 44 to 20. At the same hour, out in Evanston, Northwestern was clinching third place with a victory over Ohio State, 43 to 21.

Last night's results tossed Wisconsin back into fourth place, put Northwestern in undisputed possession of third, and left Purdue and Indiana in a deadlock for the lead. Each of the Hoosier teams has won nine games and lost two.

Three Games Remain
Only three games remain on the schedule. Indiana plays its final against Illinois at Urbana tonight and Wisconsin and Illinois make their last stand on the same floor Friday evening. Minnesota and Purdue close the season Saturday night at Lafayette.

Barring the greatly unexpected this lineup indicates that the season will close with Purdue and Indiana tied for the championship and with Northwestern and Wisconsin deadlocked for the berth of runnerup.

To share the same roost with Northwestern, however, the Badgers must reassemble themselves in sufficient form to beat the Illinois Friday night.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

Jimmy McLarnin, who arrived at the forefront of fistic fame by virtue of a spectacular knockout victory over Sid Terris, now is being touted by his admirers as a second Joe Gans or another Benny Leonard.

Adulation to that extent is a bit premature. The little Irishman is clever, and he certainly nailed Terris with a beautiful right hand to the jaw, but Jimmy is not the boxer that Leonard was, nor can he be rated with Gans on the strength of one punch.

McLarnin LOOKS like the best lightweight to come along since Benny Leonard did his mother a favor a couple of years ago. But he must prove that appearances are not deceptive by beating Sammy Mandell.

Beating Mandell may take a bit of doing, as they say overseas. Because he has been so evasive, the present lightweight champion has come to be under-rated. Fight fans in the East forget that the little Albanian from Rockford is quite a devastating two-fisted puncher himself.

It would be a shock to McLarnin's admirers if he were to be beaten in a battle for the lightweight title, but it would not be a surprise to fans who are not swayed too easily by sentiment in favor of a sensational newcomer.

Mandell is, or was when he fought in the East last, a busy, two-handed hitter who keeps everlastingly on top of his man, but still is clever enough to avoid knockout wallops like the one Terris encountered. Bud Taylor, although pounds lighter, was much the same sort of fighter, and Taylor whipped Jimmy McLarnin three times in succession.

But because McLarnin is simple, unaffected, rather wholesomely boyish, his tremendous popularity leads those who like him to overrate his fighting ability. It is quite likely that he has what it takes to become lightweight champion. But it will take more than one minute and 47 seconds of action to prove it.

An instance of Jimmy's naivete was furnished following the Terris fight. McLarnin, after a couple of handshakes, was escorted across the ring to the microphone to speak a piece.

Jimmy blushed, swallowed hard once or twice, and then stammered into the unfeeling disc:

"That Terris—er—er—certainly is elusive."

The man he referred to after the fashion of New York sports writers was stretched out, semi-conscious, in his corner, eyes glazed and limbs useless, while seconds sought to bring him to with smelling salts.

McLarnin's right hand to the jaw had knocked all the elusiveness out of Terris for one night.

One thing is certain. The little Irishman has done more to restore interest in the lightweight class than any fighter since Leonard retired. And if McLarnin beats Mandell, Jimmy will be the most popular champion in ANY division.

Jack O'Sullivan, who refereed what there was of the McLarnin-Terris shindig, is enthusiastic about Jimmy hitting, because the blow which laid Sidney low traveled only about 18 inches. It is the short punchers who are the dangerous ones. Sam Lungford, perhaps the greatest of all heavyweights, used to hit that way.

RED WISE WILL BATTLE BOBBY CALVIN AT GYM

Sluggers Will Stage Main Bout On Fistic Card Arranged For March 16.

Promoters Erl Hussey and Ed. Snider have lined up another fine fight card, which even promises to out-class the last one. It will be given Friday night, March 16, at the C. A. C. gym. In a ten round main-go to a judge's decision, Red Wise, well-known glove slinger from Portsmouth, ties up with Bobby Calvin, the boy who put Chilli-cothe on the map in fistic circles.

Red Wise has boxed on cards held in this city a few years back, and is now a seasoned boxer. He has red hair, a pug nose, and cauliflower ears, a combination hard to beat, and is even tougher than he looks. Bobby Calvin not only looks the part of a boxer, but gives promise of becoming a champion. Calvin has a terrific wallop, and swings like Johnny Carpenter, but Wise is able to take them and give plenty

SHREVEPORT, La., March 6—(INS)—Manager Schalk is whipping his White Sox into shape for the first practice game against the Shreveport club here, scheduled for Friday. E. S. Shriners' Get Together Nearly Killed Him

Mr. H. H. Paradise, New York City, writes—"Los Angeles was selected for the Shriners' Get-together in 1925, and I joined them. My bowels did not move daily, and I became constipated, sick headache, indigestion, followed by a dull, lazy, aching body feeling put me in bed and I nearly died. A brother Shriner gave me your CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. My only answer is they saved my life." Druggists 25c and 75c red pkgs.

The Cream of the Tobacco Crop

"Buying tobacco is like buying clothing, shoes, or a hat. If you buy the best, you are always satisfied."

Athletes, Shoemakers, Entertainers Await $48,500 Trans-Continent Race

Bizarre Sporting Extravaganza Will Take Runners From Italy, Finland, England and Western Hemisphere From Pacific to Atlantic.

LOS ANGELES, Mar. 6—(UP)—Supple muscled athletes in running togs, physicians, chirpologists, shotmakers, cameramen, reporters and entertainers aboard fleets of motor vehicles will form a strange caravan tomorrow, and at the crack of a pistol will race over desert and mountain to the Atlantic ocean, for prizes totalling $48,500. Of the total the first man to run from Los Angeles to New York will receive $25,000. Other early arrivals will receive varying smaller amounts.

They must run every inch of the 3,400 miles to win the money, and because sore feet and sour minds can't win races, doctors and troubadours follow in motor cars and busses.

Something akin to the caravansaries of Lalla Rookh's journey will characterize the night controls where the runners will be mended and entertained.

This bizarre sporting extravaganza is the latest adventure of C. C. Pyle into professional sport. "Cash and Carry Pyle," who made money out of professional football and tennis, expects to make money out of this race over the "Main Street" of America. Admissions have been charged to those who watched the runners from many nations as they trained at Ascot speedway. Towns that are designated at night controls are contributing and the runners will enter paid parks where Pyle has arranged for them to caper to the jingling of dollars.

Some famous runners have trained for the great event. There is Ume Gusto of Italy; Nestor Erickson of Finland; Richard Hart of England; Peter Gavazzi, England; Philip Granville, Hamilton, Ontario and Seth Gonzales, of Denver.

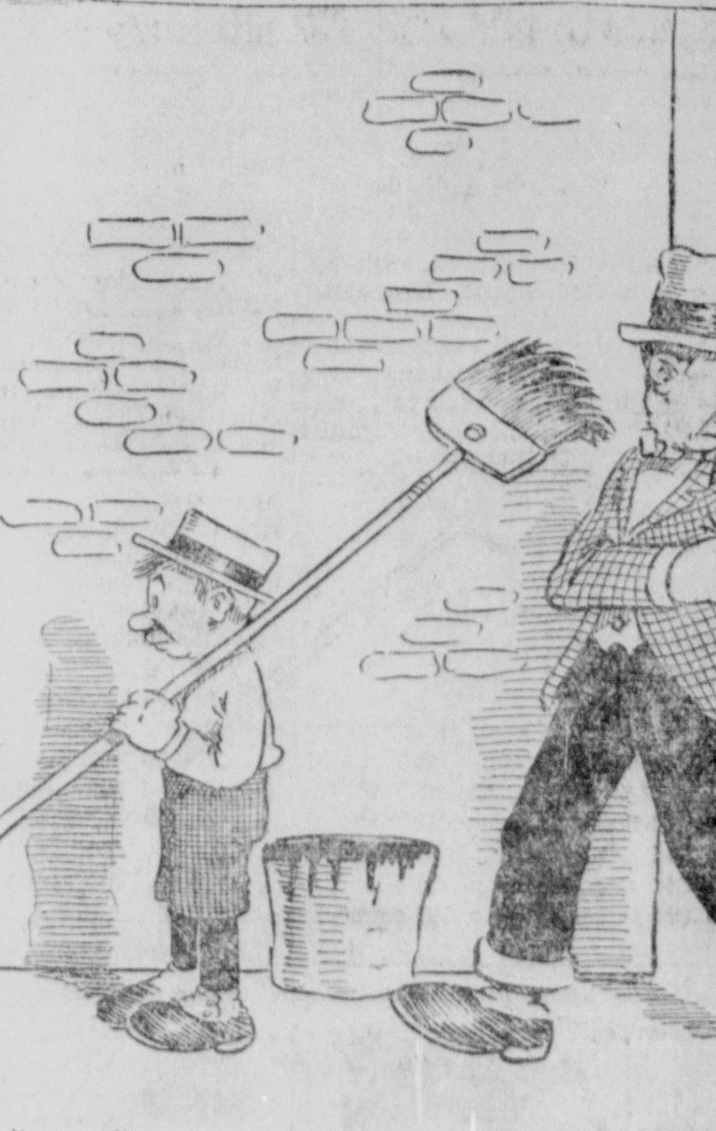

Experts have marked the course. Business agents have arranged food and comfort at the controls. Motor trucks have been converted into tiny stages, compact hospitals, well stocked larders and living quarters according to requirements. In desert places the racing troupe must build its little city at night and raise it at dawn.

There will be no rest days and the runners are expected to make 50 miles daily. Those who obtain a lead and those who straggle must even up at the controls.

Officials will patrol the course in automobiles to see that no tired runner plays refugee and brazenly accepts a lift from market mound farmers. Cameramen will record the spurts through the scenic sports "trucks with personal equipment, warm clothing, favorite thirst quenching potions and extra shoes will maintain the runner's pace.

Pyle expects to obtain a minimum of $100,000 from the towns which entertain the runners at night and he has a contract binding each entrant to appear in his motion pictures, exhibitions and shows for two years. While the financial possibilities are much debated, most followers of sport believe Pyle will win out.

STOCK FEEDERS OF COUNTY TO HAVE ROUNDUP

Records and Cattle Will Be Examined During All Day Tour of This County.

The Pickaway County Cattle Feeder Tour and Roundup will be held on Friday, March 16.

John C. Stevenson and Sons, C. E. Cromley and Sons, Mace and Hyde, J. B. Stevenson, Homer Reber, George Foresman, William McGinnis, and Gerhardt and Shook have co-operated with Paul Gerlaugh, livestock specialist, Ohio State university, and County Agent H. S. Lewis, in keeping feeder records on more than 650 head of cattle.

The results of these feeding operations are to be viewed through an inspection of the cattle in the feed lots, and the records will be discussed throughout the tour.

Well Distributed

The records are very well distributed between calf feeders and those feeding yearlings and two year old stock.

All lots will be weighed up prior to day of tour. A summary of results secured will be made, and will be available for distribution during the Feeder Tour.

This summary will show the comparative results secured on each lot—such as average daily gain, daily rations, feed cost per hundred, necessary selling price to break even, and profit per steer. The tour will be assembled at the Farm Bureau Office, Circleville, at 12:30 p. m. Following the afternoon tour of inspection, a cattle feeders banquet will be served at the Presbyterian Church, Circleville, at 6:30 p. m.

Address Planned

The program for the evening will be comprised of a "Summary of the Observations Made Throughout the Tour," by Paul Gerlaugh; "The Cattle Feeder of Tomorrow," by F. J. King, livestock specialist, Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., and "Our Co-operative Feeder Service," by F. G. Ketner, livestock director, Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, Columbus, O.

Delegations of Cattle Feeders from Central and Southern Ohio, will head toward Circleville, on March 16. A special invitation is extended to Pickaway county feeders to be present as hosts to the visitors.

Use Electric Battery To Detect Diphtheria

CHICAGO, March 6—(INS)—Reaction of bacteria to an electric charge has been used by Professor I. S. Falk of the Department of Bacteriology at the University of Chicago in inventing a new method of detecting cases of diphtheria and is now being used and tested by public health bureaus in St. Louis, Los Angeles and other cities, it was announced here.

A culture from the diphtheria suspect is suspended in a neutral solution and a light electrical charge is passed through.

The time required by the bacteria as viewed through a microscope, to move a prescribed distance toward the positive or negative poles enables the bacteriologist to determine its virulence. The most dangerous organism move the slowest, according to Dr. Falk.

Motorcycle And Two Riders Part On Bumpy Road

Sunday afternoon Tom Brunner and Blenn Bales were taking the air on Tom's motorcycle and sidecar. The day was windy and the air was cheap. On the road from Kingston to the Chillicothe pike at the county line, they were somewhat blasé with so much riding, so Tom the driver, thought it was time to speed up. So jaunting along at a fairly high rate, he decided it was beginning to be a trifle rough, and turned around to get Blenn's opinion. But Blenn was missing, having been thrown about 35 feet from the motorcycle on a bad bump.

And this is no story of anyone laughing last, laughing best for no sooner had Tom become a bit lonely without his companion than he joined him. The motorcycle, evidently missing Bales' burden, summersaulted three times into the air and landed with two broken wheels in the mud and the rest in a thorn hedge. The remains were brought to the Circleville motors garage, but little hope is held for its recovery.

Stucco in History

In the history of building stone is naturally so old as to antedate civilization itself. But then stucco is not exactly youthful. We are told that the art of stucco work had reached its perfection in Greece more than four centuries before Christ. And there are detailed instructions extant which tell how to make stucco, written by the great Roman architect, Vitruvius, somewhere around 16 B. C.

Lawful to Melt Coins

There is no law in the United States prohibiting the melting of gold and silver coins in order to obtain the metal. A coin is the owner's individual property and he can destroy it if he desires to. However, there is a federal law which prohibits the defacing of a coin and then putting it into circulation again. This is to prevent fraud by "clipping" coins.—Pathfinder Magazine.

WAR HORRORS TO BE SLAYER'S PLEA

INDIANA HARBOR, Indiana, March 6—(INS)—The horrors of Vimy Ridge and the Somme will be held responsible for the tragic plight of George Allen Chisholm, Canadian world war veteran, when he is brought to trial for the slaying of his two sons, George, 9, and Edgar, 7, his attorneys announced today.

Chisholm, who confessed that he had hurled his little sons into the Indiana harbor ship canal, being driven to the act by the president "nagging" of his common-law wife was arraigned yesterday in the city court at East Chicago, Ind., and pleaded "not guilty."

He waived preliminary hearing and was bound over to the grand jury. Before the brief court session, Chisholm had appeared at the coroner's inquest, but refused to testify. He acted on the advice of his attorneys, Joseph Conroy, of Hammond, Ind., and A. A. Sliptak of Gary.
